

Arabic-speaking Algerian in Germany

Algerians are part of the Arab Diaspora, and they have taken refuge in Germany and other European countries. Most fled poverty and repression in Algeria to live in peaceful, prosperous Germany. Most Algerian Arabs continue to speak Algerian Arabic at home and German with others. The lives of the German Algerians are vastly superior to lives of North African Arabs. Most German Arabs would fit into the lower middle or lower class as shop keepers and workers in factories, construction sites, restaurants, and farms. As they gain more education and job skills, they are moving into the middle and upper classes.

Ministry Obstacles

Sunni Islam is usually a strong deterrent to accepting the Lord, especially among people who keep Islam as a central part of their identity.

Outreach Ideas

Algerians in Germany need practical education and learned skills. Christian believers can help with this while sharing the Savior who offers them life to the full.
