

Cuiba in Venezuela

The Cuiba call themselves "Wamonae." The majority live in Colombia, but about a third of the tribe lives in Venezuela. They make their home along the banks of several rivers. Fishing is important to them, as well as hunting and gathering fruit that grows wild nearby. Women make several handcrafts from materials they find in nature. Several attempts to displace them have been unsuccessful.

Ministry Obstacles

The Cuiba have a history of people from outside taking advantage of them. On one occasion not many decades ago, members of the tribe were lured away and killed in an effort to steal their land. There is an understandable mistrust of outsiders, including missionaries.

Outreach Ideas

There are Cuiba believers in Colombia and in Venezuela. These brothers and sisters could be encouraged to obey Christ's command to make him known among other members of their tribe.

Prayer Focus
