

Ginukh in Russia

Go to the Caucasus mountains where Georgia, Russia (Dagestan), and Azerbaijan come together. Then you are in the vicinity of the Ginukh people. They live mainly in one large village speaking their own language. When the Ginukh need to communicate with their neighbors they speak in Russian. A form of terraced agriculture provides their main source of income. But because of a shortage of tillable land and the abundance of good alpine pastures, many Ginukh raise sheep, goats and cattle.

Ministry Obstacles

Like other Muslim people groups in the Caucasus Mountains, the Ginukh are suspicious of outsiders. Before you can even think of getting to their homeland, you would have to get past the Russian authorities. They also do not want anyone to enter the Ginukh area. That is one of the few points of agreement between the Ginukh people and the Russians.

Outreach Ideas

It will take much prayer until there is a spiritual breakthrough among these Muslims. But it can happen with God's miraculous intervention.
