

Chinese Hui in Kyrgyzstan

A Chinese proverb states, "A Chinese awake is not the equal of a Hui sleeping." The Hui people are known as astute businesspersons. They live across the nation of China and in seven other countries in Asia and the Middle East. A small group also resides in Kyrgyzstan. The Hui are almost all Sunni Muslims. As Muslims, they have sometimes endured persecution in China. Most Hui today make their living in trade, banking, commerce, and agriculture.

Ministry Obstacles

The Hui have been Muslims since the time of the Mongols in the 13th century. Islam is part of their cultural identity.

Outreach Ideas

Chinese Hui believers can go to Kyrgyzstan and form business partnerships with them. Many resources are available in Mandarin, the primary language of the Hui, including a complete Bible and the JESUS Film. The Hui can tune in Mandarin radio broadcasts.
