

Kababish in Sudan

The term "Kababish" is usually used to describe anybody who is half Arabic and half black. The Kababish are a loose tribal confederation of Arabic people of mixed origins, who live in a region of desert scrubland. They are traditionally Muslim but do not strictly follow the rules of Islam due to their harsh desert lifestyle. While the Kababish men move across the desert with their camel herds, the women and children stay home.

Ministry Obstacles

Access to these people is very difficult. Many are nomadic, and Sudan is harsh.

Outreach Ideas

Connecting with and talking about Jesus with home-bound women may be a fruitful strategy. Radio broadcasts for these women would also be helpful. Men who work in the marketplace could be effective in reaching the men.
