

Muslim Kashmiris in Pakistan

The Kashmiris live in Kashmir, a breathtaking region located in the western Himalayan Mountains of northwestern India and northeastern Pakistan. This highly disputed area has been a battleground between India, Pakistan, and China since the partition of India and Pakistan in 1947. While all three countries control part of Kashmir, sporadic fighting continues among the three. Mountains fill more than ninety percent of Kashmir. Most of the region lies under snow and glaciers all year due to its extreme elevation. Most of the Kashmiris survive as farmers or livestock herders.

Ministry Obstacles

Kashmir lies in a remote part of the world that is often a war zone. They also suffer from natural disasters like earthquakes.

Outreach Ideas

Kashmiris are friendly, and they have a tourist industry for those brave enough to take chances. Believers can enter as tourists during the warmer months and have contact with these Sunni Muslims.
