

Kazakhs in Kazakhstan

Kazakh people are descendants of Turkic tribes, Mongol groups, and Indo-Iranian tribes, which populated the vast territory between Siberia and the Black Sea. Because of their nomadic pastoral lifestyle, Kazakhs kept an epic tradition of oral history. They had to develop phenomenal memories in order to keep an account of their history. The Kazakh nation, which amalgamated nomadic tribes of various Kazakh origins, preserved the distant memory of the original founding clans.

Ministry Obstacles

Kazakh people have a long history of identifying with the Islamic religion. They do not understand that the one true savior is the only one who can provide payment for the penalty of their sins.

Outreach Ideas

Believers with the right skills can go to Kazakhstan and help them with their infrastructure needs. There is always a need for skilled medical personnel.
