

Kreda in Chad

The Kreda people of northern Chad in central Africa have been Muslims for hundreds of years. There are currently no known believers among them. The Kreda have challenging lives trying to find water and green plants for their herds of camels, goats, sheep, and donkeys. Droughts are common in Sahel region south of the Sahara Desert. Women and girls must walk to wells to get water for their families. The Kreda live in portable tents and must carry their few possessions. If their animals die, the Kreda face starvation and have no other means of making a living. The Kreda speak language called Dazaga. Only Bible portions are available in Dazaga. Many of the Kreda can also speak Arabic.

Prayer Focus

Ask the Lord to send loving workers to the Kreda. Pray the Kreda to develop a hunger for spiritual truth. Pray that efforts to reach the Kreda people will result in a disciple making movement in this decade.
