

Moor in Senegal

Moorish society is primarily nomadic and is organized into successive ranks of tribes, clans, sub-clans and tent units. Several tribes form a tribal alliance. The Moors who live in various parts of Africa are primarily farmers. However, the Black and White Moors of Senegal are relatively urbanized and work in various trades. This has caused the traditional structures of Moorish society to change considerably. Even though slavery is now against the law, it continues to be a fundamental part of the social and economic structure of Moorish society.

Ministry Obstacles:

The Moors are a very proud people, conveying a sense of superiority to others in the area. The Moors of Senegal are virtually all Sunni (orthodox) Muslims. Pride and dependence on one's own works are two barriers to the gospel of grace.

Outreach Ideas:

Unfortunately, there has been little response to the gospel among the Moors. Prayer is the key to seeing them reached for Jesus Christ.
