

Kalmyk-Oirat in Russia

The Kalmyks are Mongolian in origin. They live in the semi-desert region between the Volga River and the Caucasus Mountains in European Russia. Their conflict of interest with both China and Russia has led many to a life of poverty.

Their beliefs are rife with occultism and shamanism. They identify Christianity with Russia and hence are averse to the Russian religion. The initial interest in Christianity was quenched by the influx of many denominations, which led to confusion and disillusionment with Christianity.

Outreach Ideas

It is necessary to help them understand that the love of Christ knows no borders and that Christ loves Kalmyks as well as Russians. Pray for an effective gospel literature ministry to spread among them.
