

Kami in Nepal

The Kami live in India's West Bengal state and in Nepal. They are a rural people known for metal working and are divided into two groups: a group of blacksmiths and a group of gold, silver and copper smiths. They supplement smithing with agricultural work. About a third are literate in Nepali, and many are bilingual, also speaking Bengali. Others serve as healers who favor traditional medicines over modern medicine. As a rule, Kami people are Hindus. They worship different Hindu deities, and they go on pilgrimage to Hindu sacred sites in Darjeeling, a region of West Bengal.

Obstacles

The Kami people have a low literacy rate. Christ's ambassadors must produce songs, stories and recordings from Scripture. This will take much effort, but it can be the key to seeing the Kami people embrace the Savior.

Outreach Ideas

The Lord is building his church among the peoples of Nepal. Nepali and Kami believers can be led to carry the message to the Kami people.
