

Sikh Tarkhan in India

Tarkhans have traditionally been carpenters and are now one of the wealthier and best educated communities in India. They are described as a proud and very independent people. Tarkhans have a history of brave service in the Indian Army, Navy and Air Force. The British considered the Tarkhans as one of the martial races. They may marry outside their own community, and they have many sub-castes and clans. There are Hindu, Muslim and Sikh Tarkhan communities.

Ministry Obstacles

Pride keeps many people from humbly accepting the gift of forgiveness of sin as offered through faith in Jesus Christ. The Tarkhan have been described as a proud community.
