

Hunan Lu Mien in China

The Hunan Lu Mien people of southeast China have battled with the Han Chinese for centuries. They fled the lowlands inhabited by the Han to live and farm in the high mountains. The present Chinese government has maintained the policy of trying to turn the Lu Mien into Han Chinese. The Lu Mien have resisted these efforts and still speak their own language as their heart language. Most Lu Mien still practice their ancient religion of ancestor veneration, animism and Taoism.

Ministry Obstacles

The Hunan Lu Mien people live in remote mountains that are not easily accessible to Christ's ambassadors. The government stands against efforts to spread the gospel, and the Lu Mien see Christianity as a foreign religion opposed to their traditions and culture.

Outreach Ideas

Chinese Christians can go to the Lu Mien and build redemptive relationships with them. Christians can show the JESUS Film, which is available in Lu Mien.
