

Mishaba Laluo in China

The Mishaba Laluo live in Yunnan, China's most ethnically diverse province. Like most ethnic groups in this region, they are a rural people.

Ministry Obstacles

The Laluo celebrate the Festival of the Tree King, where the entire community gathers around a large tree that stands outside the village. They sacrifice a black piglet and the pig's front teeth are offered to the spirit of the tree. The rest of the pig is cooked and eaten by the people, who sing a song in praise of the power of the tree god. Such traditions keep them together as a people and accepting outside spiritual beliefs is seen as a betrayal of their people.

Outreach Ideas

There are a small number of Mishaba Laluo believers who can take Christ to their people by using the art forms they embrace as their own.
