

Lunape in Bhutan

The Lunape are a truly unreached people. They are Tibetan Buddhist, a mixture of Buddhism and pre-Buddhist shamanistic beliefs and practices of the Bon religion. Economically, they need to diversify beyond agriculture due to climate change. They speak their own language, Lunanakha.

Obstacles

No Christian materials exist in their native language, Lunanakha. There is no JESUS Film, no Bible, no tracts, no Bible recordings, nor Bible radio transmissions in their language. At this point, only those who understand Bhutanese can be reached by existing resources.

Outreach Ideas

They lack a translation of the Bible and the JESUS Film in Lunanakha. Consequently, they need Christian translators.

Prayer Focus
