

Zuojiang Zhuang in China

The Zhuang are a collection of related Central Tai language groups, which have been combined to form China's official Zhuang nationality. There are many subtribes and clans among the Zhuang, and one of them is the Zuojiang. The Zhuang worship nature spirits. They are animists, and all Zhuang groups are unreached. They live a rural or semi-urban life, where housing is built on stilts. By the early 20th century, the Southern Baptists and Christian and Missionary Alliance had churches in Zhuang areas, although most attendees were Han Chinese.

Ministry Obstacles

Difficulties include government opposition to ministry and a lack of Zhuang believers.

Outreach ideas

Power evangelism (prayer for healing and miracles) and Bible translation into the various Zhuang languages may open the Zuojiang Zhuang people to the gospel.

Prayer Focus

There are so few believers among the Zuojiang that they will need to depend
