

Garhwali Rajputs in India

Rajput means "son of a ruler." Since India became an independent nation in 1947, the Garhwali Rajputs have had to find other types of employment besides being landowners and military officers. They encourage higher education for their sons and daughters.

Ministry Obstacles

The Garhwali Rajputs consider themselves to be devout Hindus, and their Hindu religious system is a large part of their identity. They need to be humble enough to confess their sins and seek the only Savior, Jesus Christ. The Garhwali Rajputs need to hear the life-changing message of Jesus Christ in a way that doesn't add barriers of lack of understanding or cultural acceptance. They must come to see that their Hindu faith or wealth will not give them the love and spiritual prosperity they desire.

Outreach Ideas

Within the world of academics, there is opportunity to forge relationships and eventually friendships to open doors for the gospel.
